25X1A9a 1. [REDACTED] NIS Section 45 Coordinator (OSI), and I went to Arlington Hall this morning and visited the office of Dr. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] DIA, AP-1E1 (11-86264) where we met CDR Granville Moore

25X1A9a and Mr. [REDACTED] Dr. [REDACTED] has taken over the old MILA of the Army and several other activities and emerges as a major competitor in the Section 45 field. With a staff of some 29 people, 12 military and 17 civilians, he plans 30 "Health and Sanitation" studies per year, using 1100 manhours on each one, he said. A wheeler-dealer, Dr. S. has travelled widely and was for six years director of a hospital in Iran.

25X1A9a He spoke glowingly of his tour in the Caucasus and what a beautiful city Tbilisi was. He rates his H&S studies as "45 plus" and aimed directly at military planners. [REDACTED] said, however, that he was coordinating his schedule with ours and each year avoided producing on countries prospectively or recently covered by the NIS.

25X1A9a 2. In another building from Dr. [REDACTED] office was the DIA library where [REDACTED] Deputy Chief of the library, talked about his three branches - documents, maps, and books. He showed us the documents library which is the present repository of the former Army Map Service library, an ONI collection from M-5, the TIA library, and a small passle of papers from the Air Force Intelligence Center. The library specializes in finished intelligence, has 750,000 IR's and other documents, and appears to duplicate many CIA holdings. He said the documents in the AMS library go back to 1945; most of the others are more recent. A bank of four-drawer files lining one side of a whole room contains the NIS. Their operating plan is to keep recent accessions for two years and then send them to a repository, Cameron Station, on Duke Street out of Alexandria. This station is a warehouse and packaging activity which also serves as document storehouse. Most of the MILA library went to the environmental unit in DIA and is apparently not readily available to Dr. [REDACTED]

25X1A9a 3. On return from this visit I discussed with [REDACTED] the hazard that Chamberlain and [REDACTED], aware of this H&S program, might argue that we should discontinue the Section 45 and let [REDACTED] do it. I suggested that not only the force of USIB authorization but also the greater accuracy of coordinated intelligence might help the argument. [REDACTED] seemed to have the situation well in hand.
